Art and Archaeology

At the Washington Meeting, December 31, 1912, the Council of the Archaeological Institute authorized the officers to transform the BULLETIN into a non-technical illustrated monthly magazine as rapidly as was consistent with financial stability and the maintenance of high editorial and artistic standards. The name adopted by the Council at Montreal, January 3, 1914, is ART AND ARCHAEOLOGY.

The year 1914 is the year of transition during which the quarterly BULLETIN is being transformed into the new magazine. The last number of Volume IV of the BULLETIN has been issued. The four numbers of Volume V will, during 1914, be superseded by the first four numbers of ART AND ARCHAEOLOGY and the Annual Reports will appear in a single volume in December as a Supplement, retaining the name and numbering of the BULLETIN of the Archaeological Institute. The first (July) number of ART AND ARCHAEOLOGY appeared in May and the succeeding numbers follow in due course.

The purpose of ART AND ARCHAEOLOGY is to give people in an interesting and attractive way the information they wish to have in the wide realm embraced by its name. This information is imparted by interesting reading matter prepared by men and women who are masters in their several fields and by beautiful pictures produced by approved modern processes. Human interest, timeliness, and literary merit are the tests applied in the selection of articles, and artistic quality and appropriateness are the standards in the selection of illustrations.

The contributed articles are of varied interest, embracing the fields of Oriental, Greek, Roman, Christian, Renaissance and American archaeology and art. Full page illustrations are made an attractive feature. Notes from the various fields and brief paragraphs concerning archaeological discoveries, new books, and other items of current interest are worthy of mention.

The editorial Staff of ART AND ARCHAEOLOGY is as follows:

General Editor: DAVID MOORE ROBINSON, Johns Hopkins University.
Advisory Editor: ALLAN MARQUAND, Princeton University.
Art Editor: WILLIAM H. HOLMES, Smithsonian Institution.
Associate Editor: RALPH VAN DEMAN MAGOFFIN, Johns Hopkins University.
Contributing Editors: H. RUSHTON FAIRCLOUGH, Stanford University; CHARLES H. WELLER, University of Iowa; ALBERT T. CLAY, Yale University; FREDERICK W. HODGE, Smithsonian Institution; CHARLES T. CURRELLY, Royal Ontario Museum; GEORGE H. EDGELL, Harvard University. (Others to be selected.)
Managing Editor: MITCHELL CARROLL, General Secretary, Archaeological Institute of America.

Subscription price for all numbers appearing to December 31, 1914, $1.00.

Subscription per annum, $2.00. Single numbers, 25 cents.

Contributions and editorial correspondence should be addressed to ART AND ARCHAEOLOGY, The Octagon, Washington, D. C.

Subscriptions and advertisements will be received by The Waverly Press, Baltimore, Md.; and by the General Secretary of the Archaeological Institute, The Octagon, 1741, New York Avenue, Washington, D. C.

Issued every other month during 1914; thereafter monthly.
